One of the greatest Photoshop features is the availability of a lot of amazing adjustments for images you can make. Photoshop has implemented many distinct filter tools that makes it easier for the designer to adjust the images efficiently. You can now save your set of images to the Cloud or if required, open your images on all of your devices via Photoshop. For desktop editing, Photoshop has also introduced a sleek new interface that's designed to increase the efficiency and speed of the Photoshop experience. The new interface, dubbed "Photoshop Next", takes the familiar layout Photoshop Elements has been known for, but adds some improvements and visualizations that will enhance the design of images, color, and tonal values. In addition to sharing and managing projects on the web with all the collaborative benefits of a desktop app, Photoshop users on Windows 10 and macOS 10.15 can now access their desktop application on surfaces like Amazon EMR, Google Cloud, and Mac mini. Installing on such remote servers is not possible with Adobe Creative Cloud for desktop. Photoshop is the only application on these platforms that can be used remotely, making this update a huge step forward for productivity enhancements to working from home. Each of these innovations represents a step forward in how Photoshop can be accessed across devices. Moreover, the new features are powered by some of the industry's best artificial intelligence (AI) technology. The advancements in AI are built on a foundation of machine learning and deep learning, which enables Photoshop to recognize changes in an image that need to be corrected. Adobe is the only company on the planet that combines the tools of AI with Photoshop. It enables Photoshop to adapt to users' methods of editing and to be more like the creative designers and photographers that it serves. For example, the deep learning capabilities will enable Photoshop to suggest the use of specific tools while opening files based on the content in the image.
